National Commission on Terrorist Attacks

Ref: Usual cover-up response and cover-up.

To Lee Hamilton,

In earlier letters to your commission I described my position as a former federal aviation safety agent, the evidence of deep-seated corruption in the government's aviation safety offices, and how the federal offenses enabled the 19 hijackers to seize four airliners on September 11, 2001. I described how the misconduct—and the cover-up of this misconduct—had enabled many aviation tragedies—including hijackings—to continue for many years. I warned—as I had in the past—the consequences of cover-up. The June 18, 2003, letter from the commission's manager of operations, Dianna Campagna, was a continuation of the years of House and Senate cover-ups.

In my books, written to circumvent the corruption and cover-ups in government, I described many areas of corruption and cover-ups. Included in these was your cover-up of the October Surprise scheme that involved bribing Iranian terrorists to affect the presidential elections. Another member of your team, Richard Ben-Veniste, represented and protected infamous drug smuggler Barry Seal, closely linked to the CIA and other drug smuggling into the United States.

Who would be more appropriate to cover up for the corruption in government positions that enabled 3,000 people to be killed on 9-11 than such infamous people that made their deaths possible.

You had better hope that the media continues to cover up for your conduct and that the public remains in denial and apathetic stupor. Otherwise, you may have to answer for these cover-ups that have such tragic consequences for the United States and it is people.

Sincerely,

Rodney Stich
